Niagara University First Responder Advocacy Training (FRAT)

August 11, 2022
1:00 - 3:00

The Niagara University First Responder Advocacy Training (FRAT) for Disability Advocates provides an opportunity to receive the tools to work with police and fire departments, EMS/ambulance services, and 9-1-1 Call Centers to make sure they not only know your needs, but the needs of others in the disability community.

The First Responder Disability Awareness Training project at Niagara University is offering Missouri First Responder Advocacy Training for people with disabilities, disability advocates, and those invested in the disability community.

This two-hour training provides guidance on how to advocate with first responders, inform them of your needs, how to be a partner with first responder agencies, and how to become a resource for those agencies.

Upon completion of a five-step follow-up program, participants will receive a certificate and be recognized as a FRAT Advocate. There is no fee. This is a virtual training. Link to attend will be provided the day before training begins.
